As many as 13 students from Hanseo University, South Korea, and 19 students from Adger University, Norway, joined UGM's Community Empowerment Program Field Practice (KKN PPM UGM). The Korean students went to Puton Village in Jetis sub-district of Bantul regency while Norwegian students went to Giricahyo in Purwosari sub-district of Gunung Kidul regency. "These Korean students underwent activities for 8 days and the Norwegian students 5 days," said RCE Manager of Yogyakarta, Eko Agus Suyono, M.App.Sc., Monday (8/3).

The Korean students joined the Green Project program, such as planting trees and doing campaign to maintain cleanliness. "They also conduct training on goat and duck farming, introduce Korean culture to the children in the location, and provide scholarships to 15 elementary school students," said Eko.

Eko said that the cooperation between Hanseo University of South Korea and Universitas Gadjah Mada is intended to give model to students about the importance of community learning and empowerment through KKN PPM. Eko said that the cooperation between Hanseo University of South Korea
